1.0 Terms & Conditions

- 2.2 The parties understand that the mediator is independent and neutral, is not an agent or employee of ADR Chambers (UK) Ltd, and that the mediator does not give legal advice.
- 2.3 The parties also understand that the role of the mediator is to facilitate settlement of the dispute by negotiation and agreement where it is possible, and that the mediator will not adjudicate the dispute.

- 2.4 Save in the case of gross error or misconduct, the parties agree that they will respect the neutrality of the mediator, ADR Chambers (UK) Ltd, and any professional body to which the mediator may belong, and not bring any claim, demands or proceedings against any or all of these, arising out of the appointment of the mediator or the conduct of the mediation.
- 2.5 Any notes of the mediator are confidential to the mediator and shall not be available to the parties at any time, nor subject to subpoena for production as evidence in any court, tribunal or other judicial hearing or proceeding.

3.0 Venue & date

- 3.1 The mediation will take place on the date and time agreed and at the venue stated in the letter of appointment accompanying this agreement.
- 3.2 If the mediation is being conducted at the premises of a party or their representatives, then the parties will make whatever arrangements are required and advise the Administrator accordingly. Alternatively, ADR Chambers (UK) Ltd will make the arrangements on behalf of the parties and charge the parties as provided in Clause 4.7.4.

4.0 Fees

- 4.1 The amount of the mediation fee to each party or, if not a fixed fee, the basis upon which the mediation fee is to be calculated, is set out in the letter of appointment accompanying this agreement.

- 5.3 Notices of cancellation or re-scheduling shall be in writing to ADR Chambers (UK) Ltd.

6.0 Procedures

- 6.1 The parties may be represented if they wish, but legal representation is not a requirement. Where a party is not legally represented, such party is advised to obtain independent legal advice before, during and after the mediation and prior to finalising any agreement reached pursuant to the mediation.
- 6.2 No other person shall attend the mediation without the consent of the parties and the mediator.
- 6.3 The parties recognise that neither ADR Chambers (UK) Ltd nor the mediator offer legal advice or act as a legal advisor for any of the parties nor will they analyse or protect any party's legal position or rights.
- 6.4 The parties should agree and prepare a mediation brief providing the information set out in Appendix 1. Each party may also prepare a confidential brief to the mediator which will not be disclosed to the other party.
- 6.5 While it is recognised that mediation is a voluntary process and that the mediator will not, and cannot, compel the parties to settle, nor even to continue the mediation, the parties agree to participate in good faith with the aim of achieving settlement.
- 6.6 The parties agree that they will have present at the mediation such people as are authorised to agree settlement terms, or ensure that they themselves have such authority.

- 7.2 Evidence which is otherwise admissible shall not be rendered inadmissible as a result of its use in the mediation.
- 7.3 The parties will not subpoena or otherwise require ADR Chambers (UK) Ltd, a director or employee of ADR Chambers (UK) Ltd, the mediator or any other person attending the mediation under the auspices of ADR Chambers (UK) Ltd to testify or produce records, notes or any other information or material whatsoever in any future or continuing proceedings.
- 7.4 Every person involved in the mediation will keep confidential and not use for any collateral or ulterior purpose the fact that the mediation is to take place or has taken place, other than to inform a court dealing with any litigation relating to the dispute of that fact, save as otherwise may be required by statute or statutory instrument.
- 7.5 All documents, statements, information and other material produced prior to or during the course of the mediation, save to the extent that these documents have been disclosed already and are in the domain of the litigation, whether in writing or orally, shall be held in confidence by the parties and shall be used solely for the purposes of the mediation save as otherwise may be required by statute or statutory instrument.
- 7.6 At the termination of the mediation all such material shall be returned to the originating party or forthwith destroyed at their option.

8.0 Human Rights

- 8.1 The parties agree and acknowledge that the referral of this dispute to mediation does not affect the rights that may exist under Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights, and that if the dispute is not settled by mediation, the parties right to a fair trial remain unaffected.

9.0 Law and Jurisdiction

- 9.1 This agreement shall be governed by, construed and take effect in accordance with English Law.

Appendix 1

Mediation Brief

A mediation brief will be helpful and is usually expected by the mediator. It should contain the following information:

- 1.0 An outline of the facts giving rise to the disputes;
- 2.0 The issues to be mediated;
- 3.0 Factual submissions in relation to issues;
- 4.0 Expert reports in support of a party's position;
- 5.0 The suggested manner as to how the dispute should be resolved;
- 6.0 A bundle of the key documents, pleadings and orders;
- 7.0 Any case law, regulations, etc. relied upon

Parties may also prepare a confidential brief to the mediator which will not be disclosed to the other party.

Mediation Day

The mediation will probably start with a short presentation by each side of its case to the mediator and the other party.

Each party should be prepared to make a brief oral statement explaining their perspective.

During the mediation the mediator will probably speak to the parties separately in order to improve the mediator's understanding of each party's views and to facilitate the mediator in expressing each party's viewpoint to the other side.

The mediator then shuffles from one room to the other, exploring the avenues for settlement.

Information given to the mediator during such private talks will be treated by the mediator as being confidential unless the mediator is specifically authorised by that party to disclose it.

If the parties are able to reach a solution, then a document is drawn up and signed by both parties.
